6. Key Risks

Specific Risks

(1) Profit Rate Risk

Profit rate fluctuations do affect the Islamic fixed deposit returns of the Fund. Profit rates offered by the Shariah-compliant financial institutions will fluctuate according to the overnight policy rate determined by Bank Negara Malaysia and this has direct correlation with the Fund's investment in Islamic fixed deposit. The Fund's investment in Islamic fixed deposit will benefit from higher profit rate and in the event that the profit rate is low the Fund's returns will also be low. Changes in the level of profit will cause prices of money market instruments to change inversely. This risk can largely be eliminated by holding the instruments until maturity, thereby locking in price and yields.

(2) Credit / Default Risk

This risk occurs when the issuer of the investments of the Fund, for example, when a Shariah-compliant financial institution defaults on its agreement, i.e. unable to service any profit arise from deposit/coupon payments or pay the principal amount upon maturity. In such cases, investors may suffer significant capital losses with regards to their capital invested and profit foregone.

(3) Deposit Account Risk

When the Fund invests into Islamic fixed deposit account, the profits are safeguarded by the Shariah-compliant financial institutions. However, the investments are not without risk. In the event that the Shariah-compliant financial institutions become insolvent, the Fund might have difficulty in getting back the money.

(4) Liquidity Risk

It is the risk on the ability of the Fund to honour requests for redemption or to pay back unit holders' investments whereby it is subject to the Fund's holding of adequate liquid assets.

(5) Risk of Non-Compliance with Shariah requirements

This risk occurs when the investment involves instrument(s) that does not comply with Shariah principles. However, it can be minimized through careful selection of Shariah-compliant placements and money market instruments.

Investors are reminded that the risks listed above may not be exhaustive and if necessary, they should consult their adviser(s), e.g. their bankers, lawyers, Shariah adviser, stockbrokers or independent professional advisers for a better understanding of the risks.

For more details, please refer to section 3.1 in the master information memorandum for the general risks of investing in the Fund.

Note: If your investments are made through an institutional unit trust adviser ("Distributor") which adopts the nominee system of ownership, you would not be deemed to be a unit holder under the deed and as a result, your rights as an investor may be limited. Accordingly, we will only recognise the Distributor as a unit holder of the Fund and the Distributor shall be entitled to all the rights conferred to it under the deed.
